I believe that the issue I am having is related to postman proxies being able to authenticate a user to an API but I am unable to find any documentation on that. I'm running a node.js application and I have configured my private key file to use the digital_jwt module. Below is my current postman configuration: I'm unsure how to get postman to test my API and still get authentic results. A: The issue was solved by creating a private key file with the following information: { "totp": "*****", "header": "3fe8cfe945b14a8", "body": "d3bc5656e6f7d5c7bc3ce4b7f5d8b8ecf", "secret": "5a2c2b6d8be4e68bae195e16fa9fe86f4674da654", "realm": "DCOrb", "keyId": "b14a823b-f8c9-4f6c-8f9d-c72d0b8070ce", "sealToken": "b7c395fe-656e-4709-b056-3f064d46885b", "ttl": 3600, "useTTL": true } I believe the documentation that I was looking for was on the following page: Racial differences in the association of body mass index with high-risk coronary artery calcium
