However, I found this out the hard way. When I asked Cortana to change my name, I thought it would be reasonable that it would act on my request and would change the name of my Cortana to something other than the default name, which is "Cortana". However, it did not. It still said the Cortana name, and although it scanned for my voice, it did not change it. I then thought this could be a problem with the app or system, so I had the same issue on my other Windows 10 PC, and it worked fine. I then tried the MyCortana app on my current PC and could not change my name again. I went to the MyCortana app in Windows 10 Settings and noticed that it did not have "My name is" as an option, which I knew it would have if it were live, and was not to be found in the overflow menu. I then checked the "Voice settings" option and noticed that it is using a new voice model. I could toggle between the older and new versions, but the new version always had the "Basic (A speaker's voice)" option as the "Default input method", and the older version had "My name is" and "Hey Cortana" as options, and I could not change that through the settings. I then tried removing Cortana from my PC via the Start Menu, restarted my PC, and re-installed the app again, and could change my name. In conclusion, this is a problem that requires the re-installation of MyCortana, and something that they need to fix as it does not have the option to change the "My name is" option in the Start Menu.
